, Beware! the snake that slithers through the bushes.

It sheds in spring; the old layer of skin loosens.

Its head big, body thin with a heart of seven inches.

Its tongue is out, sniffing out prey to catch them.

To push on forward, it moves from side to side.

A rib-less tail that follows on behind.

A legless reptile, out there in the wild.

An ecologist's heart it surely doth beguiles.
